BOONE COUNTY TO POST COUNTY ELECTION RESULTS ON-LINE

BOONE COUNTY, KY — No more waiting for the morning newspaper or waiting through long news casts to see how local candidates' and local issues fared in this year's election. For the first time, election results from Boone County will be viewed online as vote tallies come in on November 4th.

"People will have access like never before to election results on election night," Boone County Judge Executive Gary W. Moore said. "Anyone who visits the county's Web site will be able to view the results as they come in."

In the past Boone County residents have gathered at the County Courthouse and more recently the County Administration Building to view the County election returns as soon as they become available. While that option will still be available for the public the information this year will also be posted on the county's Web site, at www.BooneCountyky.org.

"The hours after the voting booths close are always an exciting time in campaign headquarters across the county and here in the county offices as the votes are tallied," Judge Moore said. "Now, residents can experience that same excitement from the comfort of their own homes as they monitor the results."
