A new entrance sign for Burlington has been donated to the Community.

Through the generosity of a local Burlington Business, The Tousey House Tavern, the newly formed Historic Burlington Business Association (HBBA) has been able to construct and install a new entrance sign into historic Burlington.

The town has been without an entrance sign since last September, when Hurricane Ike came through and blew off the old sign. Due to the current budgetary constraints within the County, the HBBA decided to take on the project to replace the entrance sign.

According to Commissioner Terri Moore, "This is a good example of the strong community pride in Burlington and indicative of the importance of the Historic Burlington Business Association and local businesses in our community. The County would like to thank the Wainscotts' and appreciates their support on this project."
